

¡panamericans!

Joao Erbeta, guitar, came to the US in 2006, and in the short time he lived in the states managed to play the White House, Webster Hall, and the Monterey Jazz Festival, as well as all around New York and tours of the country. He's back in Brazil but manages trips to Los Angeles, where The Panamericans continue to work on new recordings.

Eddie Angel, guitar, is well known around the world for his work with Los Straitjackets, The Neanderthals, The Planet Rockers and as a solo artist. An entire chapter is devoted to him in the book, "They Came to Nashville," where he remains.

Bassist Rob Douglas is a seasoned veteran, having worked with Pinetop Perkins, Chuck Profitt and Mike Stinson. He is currently performing and recording with Robert Francis' band and The Gimme 5's. The Panamericans' release marks his debut on cowbell.

Multi-instrumentalist and recordist Pete Curry is the drummer in the group. His credits include lead guitar with the long-running surf band The Halibuts, and bass in Los Straitjackets. He has worked with Duane Eddy, The Chocolate Watchband, The Neanderthals and Deke Dickerson and the Ecophonics on a variety of instruments.

Ron Dziubla, saxophone, organ, melodica, has a resume that continues to grow. He's toured with Ricky Martin, The Royal Crown Review, and Duane Eddy, as well as his own group, recently back from shows in Egypt, where he rode a camel.
